January 13, 1918.

Golden Text: Repent ye and believe the gospel. Mark 1:16.

JESUS BEGINS HIS WORK.

Jesus went into the wilderness of his own accord, altho the common opinion is that he was in some mysterious way impelled thither, captive and against his will. On the contrary he wanted to go. He needed to go. It was the most attractive place in the world for him. He could not have been kept away from it. The consciousness of his divine commission which began in the temple in his childhood and grew in his youth in the carpenter shop came to a climax in his baptism. That was a sunrise, dissolving the last shadow of doubt.
Instantly he felt the need of solitude.
He must get away from people. A mountain was the very place. . . .

The medieval idea of Jesus' temptation, his being solicited to how to a personal devil with spiked tail, cloven hoof, horns and all, as a price for all the kingdoms of earth is crude and absurd to the mind of the Twentieth Century. The gist of his temptation was imperialism; to fall in with the idea of his fellow countrymen; conquer the world by force; make Jerusalem a second and greater Rome; take the short-cut to power, which when once gained could be used for beneficial ends; serve God with Mammon's methods. There in solitude Jesus was in the crux; one a shining and flower-decked path led to a throne; the other,
a way of shade and sorrow led to a cross. Not easily, but none the less certainly, after thinking it through,
with tears and prayers, Jesus said manfully once for all, "I take my father's way of the cross!" That moment Jesus rose from a natural and instinctive innocence to a holiness of consciousness and deliberate choice. . . .

After this great moral and spiritual triumph, of which his whole public career bore the marks, Jesus was prepared to come back to the haunts of men. But even so as a matter of expediency he did not come immediately. It was only when he heard that John's career was ended behind a prison door, that he felt he could begin his ministry without the appearance of competition with his forerunner, that Jesus returned to Galilee, proclaiming the time as ripe for the kingdom of heaven which was at hand and requiring faith and repentance of all who heard him. . . .

At the same time he began to select,
not at haphazard, but with infinite pains, the men who under his training should be competent, after his departure, to define and defend his gospel and found, protect and enlarge his church.

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN.

Choose sometime to be alone!
Salute thyself! See what thy soul
doth wear

Open up thy chest, and tumble up and down
What thou findest there, for 'tis thine own.

—George Herbert.

Great are the gains of solitude.
There one discerns his environmental page.

best, finds what it demands, takes account of itself, finds what he has and what he lacks, and so gets ready for his mission whatever it may be, large or small. . . . The temptation of Jesus is not a speculative matter. It has direct and helpful application to all human lives. It is exemplary and inspirational. He was tempted as we are. . . . Difficulty with the subject rises from a literalness which magnifies the person and work of the devil leading to the pitiful extreme of dualism, two gods in antagonism. . . . Jesus was the conscious possessor of miraculous power which he felt inclined in an emergency to use for purely personal ends, to make bread of stones to appease his hunger. He stood in the crux of a physical and a spiritual life, the one requiring bread,
the other obedience to God, the latter became the bread which sustained him, soul and body, the meat of which his disciples were oblivious. . . .
The next prompting was to create an emergency which should display his divine power, to banter and dare God. He quenched the thought as he exclaimed: "No, I must not tempt God!" . . . The final suggestion was that he get the kingdom not by his Father's slow method of the cross, but the quick way of the sword. He cried: "Oh no, I'll serve God only, and I'll serve him only in his own way!" . . . The divinity of Jesus was no bullet-proof coat. He was tempted as a man, as men are tempted. . . . Every human soul is privileged to make the transit Jesus made from natural innocence to holiness of choice. It is done by resistance of temptation. Solitude to indulge the soul answers
as Jesus did: "I'll give my obedience to God!" . . . Tempted to the short cut of dishonesty the answer is: "I'll not serve God with the devil's methods." . . .
The paradox and pathos
of it is that just where Jesus triumphed his church failed. The church came up from the catacombs to snatch
the purple and seat herself upon a throne; to build herself a palace, tho her Founder had not where to lay
his head; to lead an army into battle in spite of Jesus' word: "Put up thy sword!" . . . The church went down into the catacombs again, into the tortuous, shadowy and deceitful ways of Machiavellian diplomacy. . . .

Imperialism, autocratic and militaristic is the supreme temptation of the state today as it was of the church in the Middle Ages. It is the fateful dream that has drenched the world
in blood and threatens to engulf civilization. . . . The moment of Jesus' victory over temptation came divine refreshment to his weary spirit. Milton describes the angels coming on full sail of wings, taking the Lord away from the thunder smitten
pile of the Forty Day Mountain, seating him on a green bank and spreading a table of celestial food before him, ambrosial fruits from the tree of life and drink from the font of life.

And as he fed angelic choirs Sung heavenly anthems of his victory.

All of which is just a poet's picture of the joyous and strength-giving consciousness of having pleased God by accepting his plan in implicit obedience. . . . The temptation of Jesus is not just a stray and exceptional page.

YOUNG CHRISTIANS REACHING UPWARD.

The consciousness of the Divine presence is the strength, the joy and satisfaction of life. Seeking for God is therefore the great pursuit. He will never be found by chance, however.
Mind must be alert, purpose strong and undivided, faith cumulative, the facilities of the sanctuary, scripture and private devotion must all be utilized if this supreme quest of the soul is realized. There must be hunger and thirst before there is satisfaction. The Divine presence attained gives sense of security which nothing else affords. The consciousness of the love of God is the secret of a happy life. It is even better than life.

BOOKS OF LITERARY CHARM ARE ENJOYED BY YOUTHS OF TODAY

By Margaret Mason.

To some children books are books,
To others, with brains to see,
A book is either a work of art
Or of mediocrity.

New York, Jan. 11.—Nothing is truer than the wise old saying, forthwith that "The worm will turn." Even the bookworm, especially in the infantile and youthful form of bookwormishness,
has done it and with splendid results.
For several and sundry seasons the infant bookworm has been slowly but surely turning against the disgusting driven in bookworm that has been ground out voluminously as food for juvenile brains. Infatigable intellects have all to long been warped and stunted with the silly insipidities and crude drawings of "Chatterbox," "Our Little Ones," "Gems of Childhood" and similar periphrastics. Budding girlish gravitators have been mawkishly
muddled by intemperate and impossible Elsie books.

Tired and disgusted with turning such leaves the young bookworm has at last turned himself firmly and flatly against the old-fashioned and demand for quaint and charming verses and rhymes of childhood and bright, entertaining, well written books for school boy and girlhood has been beautifully answered with the silly insipidities and
crude drawings of "Chatterbox," "Our Little Ones," "Gems of Childhood" and
similar periphrastics. Budding girl-
ish gravitators have been mawkishly
muddled by intemperate and impossible Elsie books.

Indeed, an elderly man who has recently
well read gentleman who has recently had a breakdown number among the list of books that he sent for to while away the hours of his recuperation
from "Robinson Crusoe," "Alice in Wonderland," "Water Babies," and "Fairy Land," tales of Hans Christian Anderson.

To be sure these are all books of yore in the days before the up to date
bookworms turned, but they shine
like diamonds along with "Mother Goose," the charmingly pictured verses of Kate Greenaway, Louisa M. Alcott's books and a few others out of the mazy merriment of the mass of other mediocre output.

These ever new old favorites against which no youthful bookworm could ever be expected to turn have been gotten up in exquisite new editions however to suit the 1918 tastes. Arthur Rackham and Edmund Dulac have fantastically and beautifully illustrated most of these perpetual friends of bookland and they have all been enriched by the addition of this artistic furbishing up except "Alice in Wonderland" and "Through the Looking Glass" and somehow or other she does not seem her inimitably fascinating and whimsical self with any but the original illustrations by John Tenniel
even though Arthur Rackham himself has striven to depict her.

There are further adventures of Alice brought out during the holidays and though several book dealers assured me it was one of their best sellers and though I felt a decided predilection against it, that any modern author should have the temerity to boldly
lay hands on Lewis Carroll's adorable Alice and endeavor to put her through her paces in 1917 printed paragraphs,
it strikes me as being almost as much of a profanation as someone dashing off further adventures of "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn."

One of the loveliest new books for wee lovers of the beautiful in picture
and rhyme is "Happy All Day Through," by John G. Bowman, with quaintly colorful illustrations almost Japanese in their treatment by Janet Laura Scott. It ticks with irresistible charm both in picture and poetry
from cover to cover. "My Own Fairy Tales," written and illustrated in color
by John Gruelle, is another hopeful and artistic sign that the juvenile book-worms turning is having good results.

Let us trust they will believe in the axiom that one good turn deserves
another and keep on in best turn style until all the cheap paste-board covered and gaudily lithographed and stilly written slush is crowded off of the book store shelves and expurgated
from the home shelves where "Little Women," "Little Men," "Little Lord
Fauntleroy," "Water Babies," "Alice
in Wonderland," "Robinson Crusoe,"
"Prince and Pauper," "Mother Goose," and "Kate Greenaway's Children" are waiting to welcome other little modern book heroes and heroines worthy of their association.

MUCH SUBSTITUTE FOOD
NOW USED IN GERMANY

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Amsterdam, Jan. 11.—Ten thousand substitute food articles have been induced into Germany since the war,
according to a statement made in the Berlin newspapers by Prof. Juckelack, a prominent German food expert. His mentions as the most striking examples of successful substitution the following: Artificial butter, eggs, salad oil, honey, milk, coffee, tea, sugar, tobacco fish, sausage, cheese and caviar.
Some of the substitutes are directly harmful but others are so good that they will outlive the war and become regular articles of consumption, he asserts.

O. D. BRACE PASSED AWAY THIS MORNING

His Death Came Quietly This Morning After An Illness of More Than One Year.

This morning another of Janesville's old residents was called by the Angel of Death. With his passing, Rock County loses another of its oldest inhabitants and one of its most enterprising farmers. Although he lived before the era of scientific farming, his farm was always ahead of the times, and it was toward him that the younger generation turned its eyes to pattern after. Mr. Brace was born September 9, 1837, in Cleveland, and located on a farm in Edgerton in 1871. For the last few years he has been living in peaceful and well earned retirement. His death came quietly at 8:15 o'clock this morning, at his home, 212 Madison street, after an illness of more than one year. He leaves to mourn his loss, besides a host of firm friends, a wife and five children: O. D. Brace, Jr., of Janesville; Don D. Brace of Minneapolis; Mr. J. A. Marken, Leora Watkins, of Chicago, and Geraldine M. Brace of Janesville. The funeral services will be held Sunday at the home at nine o'clock, and the remains will be sent to Edgerton by St. Paul train that leaves Janesville at 10:30 Sunday morning. The Christian Science church will have charge of the funeral services.

John Malbon
Last evening, the Great Reaper came quietly for the spirit of John Malbon. He passed away at the home of his mother, 212 Race street, after a lingering illness of several years. All that loving care could do, was done to alleviate his suffering, but it was unavailing. Mr. Malbon more than 80 years old, and had been a life long resident of Janesville, where he made many firm friends, who will be grieved to hear of his demise. He was born in Sweden, and his many friends, his mother and father, and a brother and a sister all of Janesville. The funeral will be held from the home of his parents, 212 Race street, on Saturday afternoon, at two o'clock. The Rev. Pierson will conduct the services. Interment will be made in the Oak Hill cemetery.

Charles Swanson
The angel of death came quietly, yesterday, and called for the spirit of Charles Swanson. He had been a patient sufferer for more than three years, and all that loving care could do, was done to alleviate his suffering, but it was unavailing. Mr. Swanson came from Sweden more than twenty-five years ago, and came directly to Janesville. He leaves to mourn his loss, besides a host of friends, his wife and eight children, five sons and three daughters. George, Carl, Charles, John, Perry, George, Turk, Frank, Pinch, William, Quade, and Eber, Van Allen. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. O'Neill, formerly of Emerald Grove.

Mrs. Jessie McCarthy.
The mortal remains of Mrs. Jessie McCarthy, who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Sidney Thomas, of La Prairie, were laid to rest yesterday afternoon in the Emerald Grove cemetery. The pallbearers were: Carl Childs, John Perry, George Turk, Frank Pinch, William Quade, and Eber Van Allen. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. O'Neill, formerly of Emerald Grove.

Here Is Our 1918 Wilson--War's Worries Only Make Him Healthier

Latest photograph of President Wilson.

Washington, Jan. 11.—The Woodrow Wilson of today, sixty-one years old, is perhaps the healthiest president these United States of ours have had for five years. The above photograph shows him in his 1918 fettle, appearing to be many years younger than the sixty-one he had to confess on his birthday, three days after Christmas.

How does he do it? He's too busy to say. That same "too busy," though, according to the president's close friends in the capital, is the real answer to the question.

The weight of an increasing war work has not broken the president as it might many men. He thrives on it. Recent health has been better than it has been at any time since he took office. And the president himself says it to his endless activity. The Wilson household is one of the earliest up in Washington. Rarely is the president later than 9 o'clock at his office and at times without number he is there at 8. The day's round lacks some of the system it once knew, when there were set hours for callers, for handshakes, for cabinet meetings, etc. Everything is done by a rule of expediency since the war's kaleidoscopic program of events disrupts any set plans any time.

When reasonable the president still attempts to sandwich in a little golf for exercise and recreation. He snatches a motor trip of a few hours now and then with his wife. But most of his exercise recently is in walking.

The typewriter which became famous early in his first term is no less busy these days because less mentioned. On it Wilson still "thinks out" many of his speeches and statements. There's a mite of exercise for both in the president's bouts with the keyboard.

One rule seldom broken by the president, whatever the war work or what, is to sleep before midnight. He believes sleep a great elixir of life.

Dr. Osier and his one-time highly-praised theory as to chloroform after the 60th year would come in for a long, loud laugh from Woodrow Wilson right now—when the war would let up long enough to let him laugh.

YOUTHS OF STATE TO DO FARM LABOR WORK

Madison, Wis., Jan. 11.—It is estimated that there are 125,000 boys between the ages of 15 and 20 in the state of Wisconsin who can be used the coming year in farm labor work. A report on this subject has just been filed with the state council of defense by the director of the United States boys working reserve showing the work accomplished in the past year.

"As a result of the co-operation of the county councils of defense," the report, "and by the utilization of the district organizations of the university extension division, the boys were enrolled in thirty-one counties and a total of 1,154 are working on farms, in most cases on account of their summer work. In several counties there was a lack of interest or an inclination to carry on similar work in their own way without utilizing the state and national organizations. This attitude in most cases has changed and a general co-operation is the prospect for the coming year."

The report shows Milwaukee county had the highest registration with 326; Vernon, 90; Winnebago, 30; Sheboygan, 27; Outagamie, 10; La Crosse, 47; Douglas, 27; Dane, 4; Chippewa, 69; St. Croix, 145, and other counties with varying numbers.

"Reports from some 200 school men of the state indicate that approximately 10,000 boys from the schools were at work on farms, in factories, or at some other useful occupation during the summer," continues the report. "It is estimated that there are 125,000 boys between the ages of 15 and 20 in the state. The plans for the season of 1918 contemplate that the boys in the schools will be reached before the close of the schools and their enrollment secured. Plans are also developing to reach other boys, enroll them and award recognition to those doing patriotic service."

"All this activity is being directed along the lines of the general plan of the report, and by the utilization of the district organizations of the university extension division, the boys were enrolled in thirty-one counties and a total of 1,154 are working on farms, in most cases on account of their summer work. In several counties there was a lack of interest or an inclination to carry on similar work in their own way without utilizing the state and national organizations. This attitude in most cases has changed and a general co-operation is the prospect for the coming year."

Immediate and complete organization of the counties. County directors have been appointed upon the recommendation of the councils of defense in Milwaukee, Kenosha, Racine, Walworth, Waubesa, La Crosse Junction, Vernon, Crawford, Monroe, Buffalo, Poplin, Jackson and Trempealeau counties. In many cases the enrolling officers and supervisors already have been appointed.

DIFFERENT.

The kids at our house number three. As different as they can be. And if perchance they numbered six Each one would have particular tricks And certain little whims and fads Unlike the other girls and lads. No two glad rascals can you name Whom God has fashioned just the same.

But's tough and full of life and fun And likes to race around and run And tease the girls; the rascal knows The slyest ways to pinch a nose. And yank a curl until it hurts And disarrange their Sunday skirts.

Sometimes he trips them, heads o'er heels. To glory in their frenzied squeals.

And Marjorie. She's have more joy. She thinks if she'd been born a boy. She wants no ribbons on her hair. No fancy fussy things to wear. The things which Sylvia's soul de lights.

To Marjorie are dreadful frights. They're sisters, yet I swear, the name Is all they own that is the same.

Froud Sylvia, beautiful to see. A high-toned lady wants to be. She'll primp and fuss and deck her hair And gorgeous raiments wants to wear.

She'll sit sedately by the light And read a fairy tale at night. And she will sigh and sometimes wince At all the trials of the prince.

If God should send us children nine To follow our ancestral line, I'd vow that in the lot we'd strike No two among them just alike. And that's the way it ought to be. The large grows the family. The more we own of joy and bliss, For each brings charms the others miss.

Your Child.

It is almost as important to teach your child to be cheerful as it is to teach him to breathe deep and to brush his teeth daily. Being cheerful aids digestion, quickens the circulation, in fact, gives tone and vigor to the entire body. The cheerful child rarely complains of minor ailments.

Why We Say "Carat."

The weight used by goldsmiths in gauging the quality of gold apart from the alloy, i. e., carat, is derived from that of the seed of an Abyssinian carat flower, which, being exceedingly uniform in size, were employed in weighing gold and precious stones.

BLANKET FOR THE BABY

The Youngster Cannot Kick Out of This Covering.

The problem of keeping the baby covered is one which has to be met in nearly every household. The restless little bit of humanity will kick out of the bed, clothing and expose itself to the elements.

Blanket for Baby Bunting.

ness in bed has defied the ingenuity of many fond parents who have devised in vain schemes consisting of combinations of belts, bands and safety pins with the object of keeping the little one properly covered. This may be accomplished by means of a blanket with armholes in it. Baby's arms are thrust through these and the remainder of the blanket is swathed around its body so that while it is covered its arms enjoy a certain amount of freedom.

SLIM SILHOUETTE IN LATEST MODES

Dame Fashion has decreed that clothes this season shall give the wearer lines that are slim and that convey the impression of the silhouette. The creator of this suit has succeeded admirably in obeying fashion's behest, for it is decidedly of the mode. The gray tulle braiding on French blue serge results in an effect that is novel and at the same time military, because it conveys a memory of the uniforms of the past. The model is further embellished by cuffs and collar of seal.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

In "For Liberty," Gladys Brockwell's latest picture, the heroine, Marcia Glendon, was in Germany when the United States declared war. She suffered many indignities at the hands of the Hun, but was finally rescued by American soldiers in France. In the accompanying picture Miss Brockwell as the heroine is shown wrapped up in the stars and stripes and drinking to Old Glory. The glasses seen in the picture are held by American soldiers who are also drinking to the flag and to the brave heroine.

DO YOU REMEMBER?
When "Ten Nights in a Barroom" was done, and Kathryn Williams and Charles Gray were the leading stars? When "The Great Train Robbery" was staged, and proved the first thriller of the silent drama?

When Tommy Burns came back from Australia and toured the country with pictures showing how he lost the heavyweight championship? When, in fact, when Hart was enacting a role in "Ben Hur" during one of the seasons of that perennial success?

When Billie Rhodes was a soubrette in the company presenting "Babes in Toyland"? When Alice Joyce's picture appeared in advertisements in magazines and on calendars and you never expected to see her in the films?

When, Dorothy Kelly was an artist and illustrator and hadn't considered taking up the screen for a livelihood? When Ruth Roland was known as "California's child actress," and later toured in vaudeville?

When Cleo Ridgely was a member of the chorus appearing at the New York Hippodrome? When Marc MacDermitt was a member playing in support of Richard Mansfield, and when Lottie Briscoe—by the way, where is Lottie?—was with that eminent actor?

LOTS OF LEADING MEN
Nazimova is not at a loss for a leading man, evidently, judging from advance reports. Charles Bryan, who is Mr. Nazimova's announced as her mainstay, and on top of this comes word that Irving Cummings will act in a similar capacity. Two leading men in one film is something of a novelty to say the least.

In the course of the filming of "La Tosca" Pauline Frederick recently proved her right to stardom by doing a thirty-foot fall into the part of the Alibi which was just off Fort Marion, Fla. The scene was La Tosca's death, following the killing of Mario.

ON THE SPUR of the MOMENT

ROY K. MOULTON

CONCERNING THOSE "CHEAP" SMILES.
There is a peculiar phenomenon in connection with the two classes of tradespeople in this country. The meat dealers either cannot or do not read. They don't know when a meat is passing its best. There are many other things they do not keep posted on. They apparently never hear of a decline in the price of beef or if they do read it they don't believe what they see in the papers. Some people are that way.

On the other hand, the fish dealers are deans for literature. They have six days in the week normally to read, and they make the best of them. The fish dealers are among the best patrons of the newstands. Consequently they always know when a meatless day arrives. They keep posted, and up go the prices of fish.

OUR OWN FOOD HINTS
War Bread: War bread, an important item, can be made of potato parings and stale bread crusts. One of the important metropolitan hotels have tried it. The beautiful thing about war bread is that you will eventually run out of potato parings and stale bread crusts. Every year, the price of potatoes will be much higher than usual. When you run out of stale bread crusts you will be unable to make any more of this war bread unless someone invents a new stale bread crust.

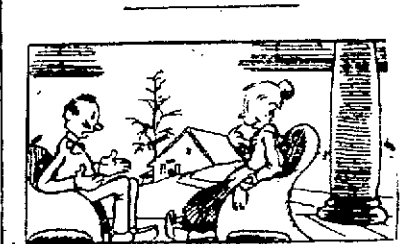

ADVICE
My good old father said to me: "My boy you are a clump. To buy steaks porterhouse when young. Be satisfied with rump. You'll save much money while you're young. If my advice you take: Then when you're old you can afford The choicer cuts of steak."

That was full many years ago. I followed his advice. I bought the cheaper cuts of steak. And saved much on the price. But times and steaks have changed since then. No matter how I hump I can't catch up with porterhouse. And am still eating rump.

The other day the chauffeur for Maurice was shot. Has Maurice a chauffeur? Several of them. And a few years ago he was lugging a tray in Martin's cafe and waiting on Adam and Eve on a raft. "Clean out the kitchen" and "Ham in the country."

Then he began dancing and now he is a millionaire. Moral: On with the dance.

Senator La Follette is in favor of government ownership of railroads. Then next step, then, should be the government ownership of Senator La Follette.

HIS TROUBLE.

She—I heard that you are a woman hater. That's not true. I merely cannot afford to marry. She—Can't you support a wife? He—I could support a wife easy enough, but I haven't enough income to support the two or three other women she would need to wait on her.

Optimistic Thought.
The surest way not to fail is to determine to succeed.

Alkali in Soap Bad For the Hair

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary multifid coconut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get multifid coconut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

The YUKON TRAIL

A Tale of the North

By
William MacLeod Raine

(Copyright by William MacLeod Raine)

"From a little knot Sheba looked down upon the top of the stage three hundred yards below her, and while she stood there the promise of the new day was blazoned on the sky. It came with amazing beauty of green and purple and amethyst, while the stars flickered out and the heavens took on the blue of sunrise. She drew a deep, slow breath of adoration and turned away. As she did so her eyes dilated and her body grew rigid.

Across the snow waste a man was coming. He was moving toward the cabin and must cross the treacherous ice to her. The heart of the girl stopped, then beat wildly to make up the lost stroke. He had come through the blizzard to save her.

At that very instant, as if the stage had been set for it, the wonderful Alaska sun pushed up into the crotch of the peaks and poured its radiance over the Arctic waste. The pink glow swept in a tide of delicate color over the snow and transmuted it to millions of sparkling diamonds. The Great Magician's wand had recreated the world instantaneously.

CHAPTER XXI.

Two on the Trail.

Elliot and Holt left Kuskat in a spume of whirling, blinding snow. They traveled light, not more than forty pounds to the dog, for they wanted to make speed. It was not cold for Alaska. They packed their fur coats on the sled and wore mittens of muslin with duft lining, on their feet mukluks above "German" socks. Holt had been a sour-dough miner too long to let his partner perspire from overmuch clothing. He knew the danger of pneumonia from a sudden cooling of the heat of the body.

Old Gideon took seven of his dogs, driving them two abreast. Six were huskies, rangy, muscular animals with thick, dense coats. They were in the best of spirits and carried their tails erect like their Malamute leader. Butch, though a Malamute, had a strong strain of collie in him. It gave him a sense of responsibility. His business was to see that the team kept strung out on the trail, and Butch was a past-master in the matter of discipline. His weight was 93 fighting pounds, and he could thrash in short order any dog in the team.

"The snow was wet and soft. It clung to everything it touched. The dogs carried pounds of it in the tufts of hair that rose from their backs. An icy pyramid had to be knocked from the sled every half-hour. The snowshoes were heavy with white slush. Densely laden spruce boughs brushed the faces of the men and showered them with unexpected little avalanches.

They took turns in going ahead of the team and breaking trail. It was heavy, muscle-grinding work. Before noon they were both utterly fatigued. They dragged forward through the slush, lifting their laden feet singly. They must keep going, and they did, but it seemed to them that every step must be the last.

Shortly after noon the storm wore itself out. The temperature had been steadily falling and now it took a rapid drop. They were passing through timber, and on a little slope they built with a good deal of difficulty a fire. By careful nursing they soon had a great bonfire going, in front of which they put their wet socks, mukluks, scarfs and parkies to dry. The toes of the dogs had become packed with little ice balls. Gordon and Holt had to go carefully over the feet of each animal to dig these out.

The old-time thawed out a slab of dried salmon till the fat began to frizzle and fed each husky a pound of the fish and a lump of tallow. He and Gordon made a pot of tea and ate some meat sandwiches they had brought with them, to save cooking until night.

When they took the trail again it was in moccasins instead of mukluks. The weather was growing steadily colder, and with each degree of fall in the thermometer the trail was easier. "Mushing at fifty below zero is all right when it is all right," explained Holt in the words of the old prospector. "But when it isn't all right it's a—"

"It is not fifty below yet, is it?"
"Nope. But she's on the way. When your breath makes a kinder crackling noise she's fifty."

There soon was a crust on the snow that held up the dogs and the sled so that trail breaking was not necessary. The little party pounded steadily over the barren hills. There was no sign of life except what they brought with them into the greater silence beyond.

Each of the men wrapped a long scarf around his mouth and nose for protection, and as the part in front of his face became a sheet of ice shifted the muffler to another place.

Night fell in the middle of the afternoon, but they kept traveling. Not till they were well up toward the summit of the divide did they decide to camp. They drove into a little draw and unharnessed the weary dogs. It was bitterly cold, but they were forced to set up the tent and stove to keep from freezing. Their numbed fingers made a slow job of the camp preparations. At last the stove was going, the dogs fed, and they themselves thawed out. They fell asleep shortly to the sound of the mournful howling of the dogs outside.

Long before daybreak they were afoot again. Holt went out to chop some wood for the stove while Gordon made breakfast preparations. The little miner brought in an armful of wood and went out to get a second supply. A few moments later Elliot heard a cry.

He stepped out of the tent and ran to the spot where Holt was lying under a mass of ice and snow. The young man threw aside the broken blocks that had plunged down from a ledge above.

"Badly hurt, Gid?" he asked.
"I done bust my leg, son," the old man answered with a twisted grin.
"You mean that it is broken?"
"Tell you that in a minute."

He felt his leg carefully and with Elliot's help tried to get up. Groaning, he slid back to the snow.

"Yep. She's busted," he announced. Gordon carried him to the tent and laid him down carefully. The old miner swore softly.

"Ain't this a devil of a note, boy? You'll have to get me to Smith's Crossing and leave me there."

It was the only thing to be done. Elliot broke camp and packed the sled. Upon the lead he put his companion, well wrapped up in furs.

Two miles up the road Gordon stopped his team sharply. He had turned a bend in the trail and had come upon an empty stage buried in the snow.

The fear that had been uppermost in Elliot's mind for twenty-four hours clutched at his throat. Was it tragedy upon which he had come after his long journey?

Holt guessed the truth. "They got stalled and cut loose the horses. Must have tried to ride the cayuses to shelter."

"To Smith's Crossing?" asked Gordon.
"Expect so." Then, with a whoop, the man on the sled contradicted himself. "No, by Moses, to Dick Fiddler's old cabin up the draw. That's where the Swiftwater would aim for till the blizzard was over."

"Where is it?" demanded his friend.
"Swing over to the right and follow the little gulch. I'll wait till you come back."

Gordon dropped the gee-pole and started on the instant. Eagerness, anxiety, dread, fought in his heart. He knew that any moment now he might stumble upon the evidence of the sad story which is repeated in Alaska many times every winter. It rang in him like a bell that where tough, hardy miners succumbed a frail girl would have small chance.

He cut across over the hill toward the draw, and at what he saw his pulse quickened. Smoke was pouring out of the chimney of a cabin and falling groundward, as it does in the Arctic during very cold weather. Had Sheba found safety there?

As he pushed forward the rising sun flooded the earth with black and struck a million sparkles of color from the snow. The wonder of it drew the eyes of the young man for a moment toward the hills.

A tumult of joy flooded his veins. The girl who held in her soft hands the happiness of his life stood looking at him. It seemed to him that she was the core of all that lovely tide of radiance. He moved toward her and looked down into the trench where she waited. Swiftly he kicked off his snowshoes and leaped down beside her.

The gleam of tears was in her eyes as she held out both hands to him. During the long look they gave each other something wonderful to both of them was born into the world.

When he tried to speak his hoarse voice broke. "Sheba! Little Sheba! Safe, after all. Thank God, you—"

He swallowed the lump in his throat and tried again. "If you knew—God, how I have suffered! I was afraid—I dared not let myself think."

A live pulse beat in her white throat. The tears brimmed over. Then, somehow, she was in his arms weeping. Her eyes slowly turned to his, and he met the touch of her surrendered lips.

He Met the Touch of Her Surrendered Lips.

Nature had brought them together by one of her resistless and unpremeditated impulses.

A stress of emotion had swept her into his arms. Now she drew away from him shyly. The conventions to which she had been brought up asserted themselves. An absurd little fear obtruded itself into her happiness. Had she rushed into his arms like a love-sick girl, taking it for granted that he cared for her?

"You—came to look for us?" she asked, with the little shy stiffness of embarrassment.

"For you—yes."

He could not take his eyes from her. It seemed to him that a bird was singing in his heart the gladness he could not express. He had for many hours pushed from his mind pictures of her lying white and rigid on the snow. Instead she stood beside him, her delicate beauty vivid as the flush of a flame.

"Did they telephone that we were lost?"
"Yes. I was troubled when the storm grew. I could not sleep. So I called up the roadhouse by long distance. They had not heard from the stage. Lane I called again. When I could stand it no longer, I started."

"Not on foot?"
"No, with Holt's dog team. He is back there. His leg is broken. A snow-slide crushed him this morning where we camped."

A New Way to Wash the Hair and Scalp

The soft, silky hair of childhood could be retained into adult life if people did not use harsh soaps for shampooing.

You would not launder a delicate fabric with any but the finest soap. Neither should you use ordinary soap upon the hair.

Heard's Fluff is a dainty, sweetly scented cake, light as foam. Instead of removing too much oil from the hair, as ordinary soaps do, the vegetable oils in Heard's Fluff impart just the right amount and feed the hair roots during the shampoo. This gives "body" to the hair, and avoids that "flying" appearance that usually follows hair washing.

Women would wash their hair more frequently were it not for the drying effect of ordinary soaps. If you use Heard's Fluff, you can wash your hair whenever it needs it, which in most cases is about once a week.

Heard's Fluff banishes dirt, grease, and is an enemy of dandruff germs. It aids in restoring natural richness of color to hair which has become lifeless or faded. Heard's Fluff aids in strengthening weak hair that has a tendency toward falling out. It is delightfully soothing to itching scalps.

The habitual use of Heard's Fluff will eventually help to bring about a very luxurious growth of hair, but even when used for the first time it makes thin hair appear thicker. Heard's Fluff does just what its name implies—makes the hair soft and fluffy.

Heard's Fluff is economical; truly it's the perfect shampoo. Treats as it cleans. A twenty-five cent cake will give eight to ten shampoos. Three cents or less for each shampoo! All good druggists sell Heard's Fluff.

There is nothing else like it—remember the name, Heard's Fluff.

NEGRO WOMEN DOING SHARE OF WAR WORK

Washington, Jan. 11.—No one has paid much attention to what the negro "mamies" and educated black women of America are doing to help with the war, but they're doing their share just the same.

Paralleling the work and organizations of white women in the southern branches of the women's committee of the council of national defense, the colored women are keeping even, and in some instances a jump or two ahead of the procession.

"The colored women," said a member of the national defense council's woman's committee today, "are valuable members of the women's army of America."

"They, too, have their men in the war and are anxious and well able to do their part. They work under their own leaders and often have their own units. Tennessee is planning to organize the entire state in separate units and to encourage them to train for nursing."

"Colored teachers in Maryland are giving of the time that they have voluntarily taken for much needed rest to do volunteer work and the state chairman including publicity reports that too much praise cannot be given to their devotion and patriotism."

"In New Orleans a negro woman lectures to other cooks of the community on the value of wheat substitutes, and they have classes in food conservation in the municipal kitchen."

"Florida under the cooperation of the colored people particularly valuable in the case of food conservation. In that state they are highly organized under a separate chairman of their own, who has her own organization, and they have units all over the state. Given responsibility and a chance to co-operate they are immensely loyal and valuable to the work."

"Maryland has a colored field secretary who has been visiting the colored girls working at Camp Meade, and reports good conditions. She has established binding relations with all the workers and is keeping a record of them up to date."

"In Amelia, Maryland, the Amelia Current Opinion club, composed of prominent colored women of that city, has taken up the study of food conservation. The majority of the offenders are farm hands who have changed their place of work without notifying the board of their movements."

MANY ATTEND VOLLEY BALL BANQUET AT "Y"

Forty Enthusiastic Fans Enjoy Gathering Held Last Evening—Plans Made for New Tournament.

The volley ball banquet held at the Y. M. C. A. at 8:30 last evening was attended by about forty enthusiastic fans whose enthusiasm added "pep" to the new tournament which begins with next Wednesday's play. After a spirited game in the gymnasium, the company assembled in the dining room at 8:30 and partook of a chicken pie supper. W. H. Dougherty, who admits that he is a mighty good volley ball player, was toastmaster of the evening, lending much dignity to the occasion by his modest wit.

A report of the finished tournament was given by R. K. Cunningham, in which the following result was announced: Captain Kuhn's team won first place with a percentage of .666; Captain Olson's team second, percentage .555.

The following captains, with their teams, for the new tournament were announced: Captain Huesel, Kuhn, Berger, Levy, Olson, Dougherty, Webster, Schott, Raymond, Capital, Thorson, Beaumont, Dobson, Erickson, Cunningham, Volcott, Ehringer, Blackman, Bostwick, Captain Tahman, Jensen, Gridley, Dale, Eas, Dunwiddie, King, Corrado, Lovejoy, Pegelow, Muggleton, Preston Langdon, Fritz. Each team will meet each other team for three matches of the games each, scoring to the best percentage of games won and lost.

The committee in charge of the present tournament very emphatically stated that every man in the association is not eligible to play, but is urged to call the "Y" and offer himself to fill a place on one of the teams.

Teams No. 1 and No. 3, Captains Huesel and Tahman, will play at five o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A. and teams No. 2 and No. 4, Captains Thorson and Dunwiddie, at the same hour Thursday. Referees will be chosen by the committee in charge.

A suitable trophy will be purchased and displayed at the "Y" building at once. This will be played for each year for four years and the name of the four winning teams will be engraved from season to season.

HIGH SCHOOL CADETS TO HAVE EQUIPMENT

The Two Companies of Cadets Are to Have Uniforms as Soon as Arrangements Have Been Completed.

There will be a meeting of the high school committee of students, representing the two companies of cadets, now drilling at the Sixteenth Separate Company's armory on Saturday with the committee of three business men representing the Sixteenth Separate Company and citizens. This citizen's committee is composed of Joseph A. Connors, Louis Levy and Amos Reberg and will take up with the student committee the question of the purchase of uniforms for the cadets. The purchase of uniforms for the cadets is now in the hands of the citizen's committee. The uniforms cost much more than that and individual members of the company will contribute for their own uniform a fixed sum to be determined and the uniforms will be made and the uniforms will be taken up at the meeting with the citizen's committee. These cadets have drilled faithfully and have made wonderful progress and while they wonder the progress and while they may possibly be equipped later with other weapons, steps being taken to make this possible. A number of high school faculty is present at each drill as well as officers and instructors of the 16th Separate Company.

HONEY PRODUCTION WILL BE INCREASED

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Madison, Wis., Jan. 11.—A pound of honey or a pound of sirloin steak—which shall it be? That there is as much food value in one as in the other has been proven at the University of Wisconsin.

To emphasize the importance of promoting beekeeping in Wisconsin is a profitable business pursuit, the university extends its endeavors to the beekeepers of the state, in addition to the instruction given the students in agriculture classes.

Wisconsin annually produces about 1,500 tons of choice honey, but the beekeeping industry has not advanced to a specialized branch of agriculture. Although much of the undeveloped land in Wisconsin and most of the present cultivated land is not so well adapted to beekeeping as it is to other crops, the university is endeavoring to place the importance of promoting beekeeping in Wisconsin is a profitable business pursuit, the university extends its endeavors to the beekeepers of the state, in addition to the instruction given the students in agriculture classes.

The price of honey has advanced during the past year from 15 cents to about 30 cents per pound. The more extensive use and the scarcity of honey is undoubtedly the cause for the raise.

Food conditions as effected by the war has opened the possibility of substituting honey for sugar. If the sugar supply is limited by increased exportation of sugar to the allies, this country could resort to honey as a substitute. This would not be put into effect unless necessitated by dire conditions, owing to the comparative cost of honey to sugar.

Harley F. Wilson, professor of economic entomology, advised the shipment of honey to the place of sugar, because it is less bulky and could serve as a jam or jelly, as well as for cooking purposes.

Such conditions would make the beekeeping business an extremely profitable one and Wisconsin would be among the largest producers as the conditions of climate, soil and honey plants are ideal.

See Keepers to Meet.
Eau Claire, Jan. 11.—Even the bee, which has always been noted for its industry, must do its bit in war times. Beekeepers of this locality are to meet here January 13 to discuss plans for producing a greater crop of honey next year than ever before in order to meet unusual demands due to the sugar shortage. A hearty co-operation between all bee owners will also be formed at the meeting.

IMPORTANT EVIDENCE OBTAINED IN COURT

May Implicate Local Junk Dealers—Paddy Miller and Henry King Sentenced to Penitentiary.

Important evidence, which may prove of value in the arrest and conviction of several junk dealers in the city who have been in the habit of purchasing rags from men who they knew secured them by illegal means, was obtained in the municipal court this morning during the testimony given by "Paddy" Miller and Henry King, who were sentenced to the state penitentiary for stealing sixteen bags of rags from the junk yard operated by S. W. Roistein, on South River street.

Both offenders pleaded guilty to the charge against them about a week ago but the testimony was taken with the idea of securing definite information relative to the junk dealers who are buying the stolen goods. Julius Rogers, owner of a junk yard on South River street was implicated by King and Miller in their testimony, as it was to him that they sold all the bags of rags.

According to the statements of King, Rogers knew that the rags were being stolen from Roistein and that he even loaned the two offenders a horse and wagon in which to carry the rags from the shed of S. W. Roistein. King and Rogers both told of four trips to the Roistein junk yard and the sale of the rags to Rogers.

S. W. Roistein, proprietor of the junk yard, through his attorney John T. Fisher, reported that, according to his books, he has lost nearly four tons of rags in the past few weeks, and that he believed that the junk dealers in the city were buying the stolen property from the thieves. The thieves were arrested after they had stolen some twine from the Roistein junk yard and sold it to Rogers. The police traced the bags of twine and arrested the two men.

From the evidence taken in court it appears that King was the ring leader of the affair and did the real work of the articles. King took a stubborn attitude in court and had a stormy session with the judge, which finally came to a close when Judge

Maxfield pronounced that his sentence would be five years in the state penitentiary at hard labor. Miller on the other hand was sentenced to eighteen months in the state penitentiary, but efforts will be made to have him placed under the state board of control for that time and if he does not break any of the regulations he will be given his release.

Both men have served previous terms in the penitentiary. King served a term of seven years at hard labor and Miller spent six months there.
